

JH: I attribute my affinity for design and finery to the fact that it was so absent in my rural Midwest upbringing. Starved for many years of anything extraordinary, I now go to great lengths to find the unique and refined. Perhaps the owners of the wonderful children's store Acorn were as deprived as I because they have filled their shop with items of distinction and creativity. Better yet, these items are all for children. So never again will a child have to live with the bland and banal, that is if their parents are forward-thinking enough to shop at Acorn.
